The Unknown American Soldier

Idea Originated in France and is Adopted by Nearly All Nations.

The idea of honoring the unknown soldier in the great world war as a national character seemed to have originated in France. It struck the general sentiment and has been adopted particularly by the nations which lost such citizens in that contest.

An American soldier who could not be identified was selected on the field of battle in France and brought home to be buried with military honors in the National Cemetery near Washington where on every Armistice Day, (Nov. 11), orations are delivered in honor of the men in the country whose lives were sacrificed for the good of humanity.

In the same cemetery in one grave are buried the bones of 2211 unknown Union Soldiers of the Civil War "gathered from the battle field of Ball Run and the Route to the Rappahannock." "Over their remains is a marble or granite block on which is an appropriate inscription to their memory and the lasting gratitude of their country which they have helped to save.

But the honoring of the unknown American Soldier as a national character is much different. He is being enveloped with a sentiment which must deep on with the ages that unknown soldiers in other wars do not have.

Dr. Cushman, in his six greatest characters produced by the Great World War makes this one the greatest of them all. This seems far fetched and unbelievable. Granted that he was brave and heroic but this does not make him great. Sentiment can not make that great which is not. The idea of honoring the Unknown Soldiers who have sacrificed their lives for their country is grand—a splendid conception.

This unknown American Soldier must have more of a history than is generally known. On what particular field was he found? What was his condition? Were others lying around him? Who gathered together the remains, and what were the orders given for that particular body to be selected? The field of battle has a history. Some who fought there and survived must know something of what took place there. All these things and more will some time be inquired into and found out.

The writer has visited four National Cemeteries, Gettysburg, Antietam, Arlington and the Soldiers' Home near Washington. In the four cemeteries of the unknown dead of the Civil War their graves are marked with small white stones. In a few cases the organization to which they belonged is known. Some mistakes were made. One Walker enlisted from Stomach in Co. K. of the 20th Me. which held our line on Little Round Top against all attacks. Walker was desperately wounded. Among the names of those killed or died of wounds and Gettysburg, it is stated was Orin Walker. He did not die of his wounds but recovered. It is many years and he is in Pennsylvania. Some unknown soldier must occupy at Gettysburg the grave marked with Orin Walker's name.

What about great revenues unjustly gained?—Proverbs 16:8.

Idea Originated in France and is Adopted by Nearly All Nations.

The idea of honoring the unknown soldier in the great world war as a national character seemed to have originated in France. It struck the general sentiment and has been adopted particularly by the nations which lost such citizens in that contest.

An American soldier who could not be identified was selected on the field of battle in France and brought home to be buried with military honors in the National Cemetery near Washington where on every Armistice Day, (Nov. 11), orations are delivered in honor of the men in the country whose lives were sacrificed for the good of humanity.

In the same cemetery in one grave are buried the bones of 2211 unknown Union Soldiers of the Civil War "gathered from the battle field of Ball Run and the Route to the Rappahannock." "Over their remains is a marble or granite block on which is an appropriate inscription to their memory and the lasting gratitude of their country which they have helped to save.

But the honoring of the unknown American Soldier as a national character is much different. He is being enveloped with a sentiment which must deep on with the ages that unknown soldiers in other wars do not have.

Dr. Cushman, in his six greatest characters produced by the Great World War makes this one the greatest of them all. This seems far fetched and unbelievable. Granted that he was brave and heroic but this does not make him great. Sentiment can not make that great which is not. The idea of honoring the Unknown Soldiers who have sacrificed their lives for their country is grand—a splendid conception.

This unknown American Soldier must have more of a history than is generally known. On what particular field was he found? What was his condition? Were others lying around him? Who gathered together the remains, and what were the orders given for that particular body to be selected? The field of battle has a history. Some who fought there and survived must know something of what took place there. All these things and more will some time be inquired into and found out.

The writer has visited four National Cemeteries, Gettysburg, Antietam, Arlington and the Soldiers' Home near Washington. In the four cemeteries of the unknown dead of the Civil War their graves are marked with small white stones. In a few cases the organization to which they belonged is known. Some mistakes were made. One Walker enlisted from Stomach in Co. K. of the 20th Me. which held our line on Little Round Top against all attacks. Walker was desperately wounded. Among the names of those killed or died of wounds and Gettysburg, it is stated was Orin Walker. He did not die of his wounds but recovered. It is many years and he is in Pennsylvania. Some unknown soldier must occupy at Gettysburg the grave marked with Orin Walker's name.

Ad in a Boston newspaper says: "Watch! Man to melt on small cup." Name withheld, should think it would be hard to find anyone to qualify for the difficult position at this season of the year. Now if they had advertised last July, we could have put them in with a number of persons who would have been glad to melt any man, and no doubt would have done so on a small cupola for a remuneration. Another ad in the same paper says: "Guaranteed fast color?" and all "doctors" guaranteed not to run." Says a funny thing to us to guarantee fast color not to run. Should express our opinion that the more they run the faster they would be. The ad says: "Guaranteed fast color?" and all "doctors" guaranteed not to run." However, we believe that it should be directed to the fire, instead of down Main St., on "seeing Fryeburg" and also that when demonstrating the chemical hose to the public, the stream should be directed in the vicinity of the conflagration. A new real estate manipulator has appeared on the horizon to threaten the supremacy once enjoyed by Fred E. and later by the Saco Valley Realty Co. The Gray Development, T. C. Eastman and others. This latest and perhaps keenest operator is none other than our old friend, Boner C. D. Ridlon, who, with his vast Rice Hotel Annex property, bids fair to back in the limelight for some time to come.

The Flyer Editor was cordially received by Publisher Sanborn of the Advertiser, at the Advertiser Plant recently, and was also hospitably received by Mr. Sanborn's courteous and efficient corps of assistants. We express the hope that the friendly relations may continue, as it would be regrettable indeed if two representative papers like the Advertiser and Flyer were engaged in a bitter rivalry, such as some of our contemporaries seem to "enjoy."

Too Much "Acid?"
Excess Uric Acid Gives Rise to Many Unpleasant Troubles.

AUTHORITIES agree that an excess of uric acid is primarily due to faulty kidney action. Retention of this toxic material often makes its presence felt by sore, painful joints; a tired, languid feeling and, sometimes, toxic backache and headache. That the kidneys are not functioning right is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Thousands assist their kidneys at such times by the use of Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic. Doan's are recommended by many local people. Ask your neighbor!

Botanic Balsam Best for Dangerous Hang-on Coughs
Druggists Declare It is the Only Cough Balsam of Its Kind

If you were told by your druggist that he could prepare the best and quickest acting cough balsam there is, but that the price would be high because of it taking 5 hours to compound, and the ingredients expensive, you'd want that cough balsam, regardless of price, wouldn't you?

Fortunately your druggist has on hand at cost of only 35 cents this very cough balsam. Offers laboratory methods, large quantities, but prepared as carefully as a personal prescription enables your local druggist to sell you Adams' Botanic Cough Balsam at this popular price.

To end coughs in the quickest time, dangerous, obstinate ones at that, go to your druggist and get Adams' Botanic Cough Balsam. It is made of proven ingredients, formula on the label, that were used 60 years ago. It is the same today, no change.

No Engine Fumes in Buick closed cars

In the 1927 Buick, the new Vacuum Ventilator pulls engine fumes and gases from the crankcase and ejects them outside the car.

This vital new Buick improvement does away with noxious odors. It adds greater luxury and pleasure to enclosed car operation.

The Vacuum Ventilator serves another very important purpose. It prevents crankcase vapors from condensing and diluting the oil. Owners of 1927 Buicks are advised to drain their crankcase oil only 4 times during the year.

For luxury, and for economy, own a Buick.

MAN earns and woman spends. For many years this has been the popular plan in the American home. And in most cases it is a very good arrangement.

Too seldom, however, does the wife-and-mother receive due credit for her part in the enterprise. Earning a comfortable income today is a mighty fine accomplishment—"a man's job," sure enough. But the wise investment of the family funds is also far from child's play. This most often is Mother's task, and she deserves a medal for her able handling of it.

Women as a rule are good buyers, because they study their problems. They budget their resources, adjust their purchasing schedule to the budget, and buy carefully.

The best help they get in marketing comes from the ads in their home newspaper. They find that intelligent study of ads means economy of money and time.

The woman in your home knows how true this is.

Two Military Gents

Both From Oxford County, Buried in the Congressional Cemetery at Washington—The Lawyer, David Dunn

Charles Andrews was a native of Paris and a lawyer. He began practice in the town of Turner, then a part of Oxford County. He afterwards returned to his native village of Paris Hill, where he resided in the latter village he was elected to Congress and died in Washington during his term. It was next to impossible to get bodies home from such a distance in 1861, so his was buried in the Congressional Cemetery so called, in the Capital City.

It is a strange coincidence that another citizen of Paris Hill, a member of Congress, should die in Washington during office and be buried in this cemetery. This citizen was Timothy J. Carter. The same Congressional Cemetery, usually attached to this burial ground, gives rather a wrong impression. It is not a cemetery established by Congress, or one receiving endorsement from that body, but property belonging to the Episcopal Church. It was the earliest burial ground set apart in the city, and the only one in the early days of the nation, so most government officials dying in Washington were interred there, and not only Americans but foreign representatives as well. One grave of an Italian chief who died while visiting the "great father" is in Washington.

David Dunn, a lawyer, although a resident before the Oxford County courts. He was a picturesque character to those who knew him in his later years. On his visits to Paris in these years, he was a frequent guest, and not of the later Paris Albert variety, but the earlier type of the Andrew Jackson age. His hair was topped by a tall hat of the same period, and in one hand he always carried a faded blue umbrella. Dunn had a caustic tongue and a dry, almost humorless, and it was not until the things that he was noted—hated and loved. Dunn had had considerable experience in the world and was thoroughly disenchanted. He knew the ways of the world and not much faith in either; but under that, when circumstances brought him to the surface, was a kindly heart and a playing one. Dunn had taken quite a part in politics. He had served in the last office department in Washington, and the legislature in Augusta. In this last place he had been speaker in the house of representatives, and by reason of that and the hand of death was the governor of Maine for a single day.

As a sample of his humor and his disenchantedness of government officials, he was once asked what he did when he found he was governor, said:—"When I found I was governor, I put for Poland as fast as I could, and I was with a governor for one day."

Although Dunn knew the vanity of pomp and show, he probably loved it as other men do. In his day, there were no Knights Templar or Patriarchs Militant, whereby a man could dress up and parade, but there was the "string bean" "string bean militia," where anybody could be a "string," in fact had to be "string," had to dress in homespun and carry a pole with a "bean" on the end, and a man with a "bean" could be an officer and dress in a blue coat with brass buttons on it and wear a hat with a feather on it.

Both Dunn and Andrews belonged to the militia, as every self-respecting man did in his day. Both were officers—the first a major and the second a colonel—and both, without the least hesitation, as the letter below will show.

This letter was written at the close of a term of court at Paris (the date gives the year and month). Both have been nearly forty years ago among Colonel Andrews' papers by his daughter, Miss Persis Andrews:

"Paris, October 13th, 1842. Dear 'Kannel': On adjournment of court yesterday P. M., I wished to 'home depart' according to the proclamation made, and to go home with my gun and my hat! What a stew! At first I called on the Attorney General, the grand jury, and all other officers of the militia to pursue and punish the thief and, although in a great hurry, I at last concluded to be patient. Patience, he force, the Spaniard said, and wait until all was gone out and then see if all the hats would disappear, 'vi et armis', or whether there would be left one for the major. After everyone had taken French leave, I saw a solitary hat standing in the midst and nobody all around. On looking at it I found it marked 'O. Andrews.' O Crackee! O Blazes and Scissors! Very similar to both from Allen's! Both have been in the service of our much loved country! What a train of ideas all rushed into one's mind!

"When Freedom goes up to Turner, I shall send this up marked 'Please exchange' and perhaps it will be well enough, on some occasions not to say anything about it. Yours in the bonds of Liberty—David Dunn, Major."

In connection with this it may be interesting to note that the writer saw the last parole of genuine "string bean" militia in Maine. It was in 1879, at the centennial exercises of the town of Paris. The men comprising the company were old men who had drilled in the old time militia days. The company was commanded by Colonel Orison Ripley and the first lieutenant was Colonel William Smead. The dress officers and men were the same as in days of yore.

The writer was shown the uniform coat worn by Thomas Crocker, of Paris, who was an ensign in 1812 and marched to the defense of Portland. It was of blue cloth, swallow-tailed, and faced with red. It was shown by his daughter, the late Mrs. Myra Snow. It was one hundred and two years old at the time, shot through with holes (not bullet holes but moth holes) but the indigo coloring was as bright as when colored.—Charles E. Waterman.

TOOK GUIDE INSTEAD OF DEER

Dr. F. C. Bunn of Orange, N. J. failed to get a deer on his last visit to Maine.

He has cruised in the Upper Magalloway district for many seasons and has always got one. Not so this time. Many were seen but none stopped.

The good doctor wouldn't return empty handed so he commandeered his guide Edwin Story, usually called "Jack," for his last hunt to go home with him. He did it and gently enjoyed the visit. He even got a front page position story in the Daily Courier.

"Jack" however prefers being a citizen of Wilson's Mills, Maine than living in Orange, N. J. or any other city, with all its modern conveniences, fuss and feathers.

He has returned to his wilderness home and is much pleased with his visit.

Papers and Books from a By-gone Age

Fred C. Weston of Bolster's Mills Shows Us a Collection of Antiques

Many of these articles have been in the family for years and date back to the grandfather who preserved the relics with great care.

A dollar greenback bearing the name Solon P. Chase, issued by act of July 11, 1862 is a curious paper, also the ten cent silver plates common in the days of the rebellion is another keepsake.

A note quite out of the ordinary is worded thus: "Received from my beloved wife, Catherine Haskell, one cow and calf, which he agrees to return at lapse of 3 years in same condition. Wm. Haskell, witnesses, John Brackett, Jacob Haskell, Otisfield, May 10, 1774."

The annual report for the town of Otisfield in 1873, printed at the News Office, Bridgton is in make up not unlike present day reports. Selected were J. K. Lovell, James Mains and Moors Hancock. Total valuation $277,261.00; No. taxable polls 231; no. inhabitants 1100.

"Onward and Upward" was the motto of "The Hillside Wreath" published by the students of the Hillside school, at Bolster's Mills. Mrs. Weston has Vol. I, No. 1, issued in November 1859, containing eight pages devoted to local literary geniuses. No advertising matter found on the sheet. An editorial states that the school opened in the Maple Row neighborhood in 1857 and removed to Bolster's Mills village in the spring of 1858. There are no sessions of less than three years in the district school with sixty registered. Total number since the commencement 234. Tuition per term was $2.50 and $3.50, board $1.50 and $2.00 per week extra.

A small pamphlet, entitled "Confessions in Faith and Covenant" of the Congregational church of Otisfield and Harrison as adopted by the Otisfield school, Nov. 19, 1814 and by Harrison on June 20, 1834. According to this record the Otisfield church was organized Nov. 2, 1797 with eight members. Rev. Thomas Roby was installed pastor and dismissed Sept. 4, 1810. There was no settled minister until Nov. 2, 1814 when Rev. Josiah G. Merrill was placed in charge of the flock, and the covenant accepted. There were ten members at that time. When the forms for the pamphlet closed in 1834, the total membership for twenty years was 152, nineteen had died, twenty were dismissed and two excommunicated, leaving 111 in 1834 standing. The Harrison Congregational Church organized Feb. 15, 1828. Started with eleven members, three united that year. There was a struggle with small growth until 1830 when eleven were received with membership. Two years later sixteen united. For seven years ending Nov. 17, 1838, fifty-one members had been received, one died, two were dismissed.

A small book containing twenty-four pages was a masterpiece for the year 1818. This was published by Coolidge Hale in Hartford, Hamlen & Newton Printers. The title is "A New Hieroglyphical Bible for the Amusement and Instruction of Children."

In the Old Testament have been illustrated with wood cuts similar to modern rebus and primary school stories.

The Old Farmer's Almanack for 1805 has a familiar appearance as subsequent editions follow closely the original make-up. Perhaps the striking contrast is "for" used according to rules for spelling at the time. As what is now Oxford County was a part of York, the Almanack imparts the information that Probate Court is held at Fryeburg on Friday and Saturday immediately preceding the Court of Common Pleas in August. Some thirty-one stage routes are listed for trunk lines radiating from Boston. In the District of Maine the line from Portland to Wisconsin was of sufficient importance to have a place in the list.

A home-made account book covering several months in 1794 fails to disclose the owner's name or residence. Documentary evidence shows that Johnathan Armstrong owned it. I. e. o. d. for "I am put in my pasture"; Samuel Whitney was "letter" to one quintal of fish 10.4s.; Thomas Knight was taxed 10s for seven hundred lbs; Job Knight was in debt for fish, a hat, corn and one "payer of trousers"; James Higgins was charged with one "payer of shews, a shirt, making a payer of trousers" and a list of commodities including fish and barley.

The Right and Wrong Way to Make Your Will

Many men attempt to draw their own Wills. This is the wrong way to make a Will. Such "homemade" Wills are dangerous for they are written with little knowledge of the legal requirements and phraseology of will making.

If you have written your own Will, take it to your Attorney and have him test it in order to make sure that it complies with all of the requirements of the law and that its legal interpretation carries out your wishes.

The proper way to make a Will is to jot down brief memoranda as to how you wish your estate distributed. Take them to your Attorney for his guidance in drawing your Will. Only a competent Attorney should ever draw a Will.

Ideal Vecto Heater
For Smaller Homes and Other Buildings
Price $99.00
Circulates Healthful Warmth Throughout the Home for the Usual Cost of Heating One Room
The Ideal Vecto Heater is a clean, compact, self-contained heating unit—a perfected, scientific application of nature's way of spreading warmth.
Instead of radiating an intense heat for a short distance in one room only, the Vecto Heater distributes an even, comfortable warmth through every room. This it accomplishes by its very extensive and scientifically designed heating surface.
Large volumes of air are continuously warmed at moderate temperatures. In accordance with the natural law of gravitation, the warmed air rises and circulates steadily throughout the home, bringing clean and healthful warmth to every nook and corner. The Ideal Vecto Heater thus actually warms and circulates the entire body of air in a home, six to ten times each hour. Yet because of its special, exclusive features of design, it consumes no more coal than is ordinarily used by old-fashioned heaters to warm one room!
